Production Description

FIBERGLASS TUBE

Fiberglass tube is a profile with a fixed cross-section shape that is continuously produced by using glass fiber as a reinforcing material to form a mold with a consistent cross-sectional shape, and after solidification and molding. The value of its longitudinal bending strength and impact strength exceeds that of ordinary profiles.

The use of glass fiber mat increases the transverse strength of the profile so that it has good anti-corrosion and anti-cracking properties. Therefore, glass fiber tube have great advantages, such as light weight, high strength, good elasticity, stable and precise dimensions, insulation, non-thermal conductivity, flame retardant, beautiful and easy to maintain.

Fiberglass tube are widely used, and can be used in flagpoles, awnings, tents, curtains, benchmarking poles, exhaust fan columns, car antennas, construction, bridge reinforcement, mechanical driveshafts, golf clubs, courtyard fences, kite frames, umbrella frames, and support blankets Frames, aircraft model frames, luggage frames, fishinggear accessories, etc., especially in corrosive environments, are ideal products to replace steel and other materials.
